THE POLITICAL REVOLUTION.

The great problem which seems to agitate the New York World whether Mr. Taft has committed sujerde. It is already in its third edition. We rather think he has, as a political mitter. The Republican party will go down like a sinker in the next campaign for it is destined to have the Presi-If Republicans were free to select a ticket they might make a good fight but party is beaten before it opens even the preliminaries. That speech the Massachusetts was very weak and showed the President is reduced to pretty cans would put up Hughes and Cummins or La Fellette and Johnson (Gov. ernor of California) they might wage an interesting battle. But with the tariff reformers and independents and tens of thousands of Republican farm-He would save wear of hody and vexation of spirit by quitting the game of politics for which he is very poorly equipped. Mr. Taft is a good judicial officer when on the bench but he is a tyro in politics. He went to piece early in his administration and is hopelessly stranded. If a vote were to i early in his administration and is hopelessly stranded. If a vote were to be taken today between him and Mr. Bryan, in Offic, the latter would carry the State by one hundred and fifty thousand. Whole neighborhoods of Redeans are in open and determined revolt. Anti-Taft Republicans are the Farmers' Free List bill which he veteed because it had not been okayed reverse themselves until they have made trial of their new agnts. That is the method of all real democracies. What is unpleasant about the coming campaign is that it will not be war. It bids fair to present only the spectacle of a massacre. No campaign for forty years has opened so unpropitiously for the Republican candidate.

DIVIDE THE DISHONOR,

How far may the lawyer go in the protection of his client? Judging from an illuminating exhibition in Columbus he may go as far as the meeting place of parallel lines-which the higher mathematics my is in infinity.

Colonel Diegle, awaiting sentence for legislative crookedness, let it be known that he would make confession. Forthwith, the lawyers representing indicted members of the general assembly hurried to Diegle's side. There were conferences to which the public was not invited, but the purport of which the public has no difficulty in surmising. For Diegle changed his mind about confessing. He had nothing to confess, he declared, though he might make a statement. His conscience-after the conferences-went through a readjustment.

The profession of the law boasts a set of ethics. Occasionally when But there appears to be tacking any well-marked line which defines the fence between the lawyer in good standing and the so-called "ahyster." The public rights, the moral standards, the plain questions of what is decent and what is all wrong, only in an indefinable way enter into the material which master in beating of a hawk attract makes up the fence.

CASE GOING AGAINST BEATTIE.

The evidence goes badly against Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., who is on trial for the murder of his wife at Chesterfield, Virginia. Everything adduced so far points unerringly to his guilt. His own story is contradicted by the evidence of disinterested witnesses and it is pretty clear that he committed the crime and that that fact will be established. A correspondent says of Saturday's proceedings:

"The most dramatic tableaux ever staged in a Virginia murder trial, was presented here to lay when the jury trying Henry Clay Beattle, Jr., for the murder of his young wife, inspected the blood-stained automobile in , which the defendant carried his dead wife to her uncle's home on the night of the tracedy.

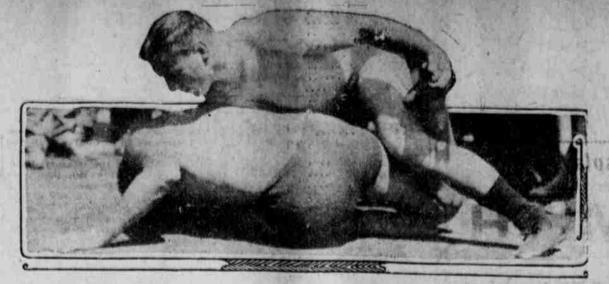

While deputies held back the struggling crowds of curlous spectators. Beattle , with a cigarette between his lips, looked on unmoved, but his age: father, sickened by the sight, turned away and wept. Special Prosecutor Wendenburg pointed out to the jurors that there was no blood on the underside of the flooring, contending that no blood had soaked through the cracks. This point was made to support the contention of the state that Mrs. Beattle had been killed upon the turnpike and not in the car."

A man who is in every way worthy of perious consideration for the Dem. ocratic nomination for Governor of Ohio is Hunt of Cincinnati. Democrats who has cast off his wife and broken up his family to associate with the demi-monde, but they should insist that a man of respectable morals should of the general high moral character of Ohio's governors. Our chiefs of State social and moral life and the men who would elevate to that place a man of low and brutal instincts don't know what kind of dynamite they are fool ing with. But Hunt of Cincinnati or Baker of Cleveland would be worthy to succed to the gubernatorial office. Also, Daugherty of Fairfield, Sharp and worthy of the suffrage of the people. But in an age of reform the people will hardly stand for a moral degenerate. That would raise forty kinds of trouble before it would end.

Public opinion is pushing along the parcels post project and it is believed Congress will enact legislation to initiate it next winter. Nearly every counfry of Europe has this system of sending cheaply merchandise by governmen post. But the express companies' managers have brazenly held up Congress When investigated it is found that these express magnates are really bis holders of railway stocks and that these express companies are used by them to hold up the people and rob them. Since the facts are known there has arisen a public opinion for a parcels post which will not down. Every longing. It pays people five upon the slightest pretex, and that Congressman and Senator who comes before the people hereafter should be "heckled" on this matter and forced to take a position. It is time these express rabbers were choked off.

Mr. Taft doesn't seem to know that the farmers are with the Insurgents The trouble with Taft is the Insurgents are just about exactly right and he tens' schedule in December that reason was good in July and August. The reason the tariff board did not report was because Mr. Taft would not let Rankin Building, 22 West peeted to pave the way for Englishment That board has been ready for months to report. It was ready it report. That board has been ready for months to report. It was ready Gay Street, Columbus, Himt. has warned the people against Kitchener and England and it has tariff experts. Mr. Taft can deceive himself but he can't deceive the people. Ohio,
